PORT ALBERNI -- The naked body of a 16-yearold Nanaimo girl was found in long grass here Thurs-

The girl, identified as Violet Martha Jones, had been strang-led with her own stocking. Police today began piecing to-gether the last movements of the dark-haired student.

A team of four special investi-gators from Victoria interviewed Violet's friends in an effort to pinpoint the killer. Violet's body was discovered. Thursday by CPR employee Delbert Craig.

The stocking was still tied tightly round her neck.

ACROSS FACE The charred remains of her shirt were across her face.

Police believe the killer set fire to the shirt and dropped it on the young girl's face after strangling her—possibly in a bid to make identification difficult, Her slacks and underclothe were scattered in a nearby field.

A post mortem has been ordered. Results are not expected until Saturday.

Police are not yet sure if Violet was sexually assaulted.

Equality in Health

handling of one of the most difficult and important social welfare issues in Canada's history.

There will still be much negotiation on details of the plan before it can come into effect but a solid basis has been established at the federal-provincial conference on which the provinces can work either to integrate existing plans into the federal framework or to set up new plans where they do not now exist.

In broad outline Mr. Pearson's proposal follows along the lines recommended by the Hall Commission report on health services and particularly where it stipulates that to qualify provinces must operate their plans publicly and universally with comprehensive benefits and transferability from one province to another. The federal plan is most definitely not "nationalized" medicine although there is one element of compulsion-support of the plan through taxes or some other form of mandatory payment-which will be decried by a minority of Cana-

Undoubtedly the greatest hurdle which country-wide medicare will have to overcome will be reconciliation of the medical profession to public administration of the scheme. This is an element which is of no less importance to all Canadians who will benefit by medicare than it is to the doctors.

Obviously any type of administration with which a large portion of the medical profession feels it cannot co-operate would doom Canadians to inadequate care. The administration must be such that doctors are assured that their professional standing is in no way impaired. No doctor will be obliged to join the program if he feels that he can successfully earry on his practice outside it, but the plan should be devised in such a way that most doctors will find it beneficial to join.

A critical objection to nationwide medicare which has been voiced by the medical profession is that there is not enough manpower -in terms of doctors and ancillary medical service people—to operate it. This is another way of saying that if all Canadians were able to pay for medical attention all of them

Mr. Justice Hall, in his second ards.

There is, however, still the fact that the training of doctors and other medical people is not keeping up with the increase in population nor the demands for increasingly pecialized services. For that reason Mr. Pearson proposed at the federalprovincial conference that a health resources fund be established to provide increased capital grants for medical research facilities, teaching hospitals and medical schools. It may be necessary, additionally, to carry out the Hall report recommendation that professional training grants be made to post-graduate students qualifying for medical teaching in order to build up medical college staffs.

The cost of a national medicare. plan is undoubtedly going to be subtantial—an estimated $600 millions a year at the time of its inauguration. However, some of the arguments against the program based on its cost fail to consider all the factors involved.

References to the Deutsch Report on economic goals are misleading if they infer that a health care scheme is going to rob the country of $600 millions in capital which could be more usefully employed. Mr. Justice Hall pointed out that Canadians by next year would be spending $506 millions on this type of medical care paid for privately and that this sum would rise to $640 millions by 1971.

In other words, something like less than $100 millions extra is going to have to be squeezed out of the economy-not $600 millions-in order to finance comprehensive medical care for all citizens. Against this less than $100 millions must be balanced the incalculable loss suffered by a country in which any significant proportion of the people estimated by the Hall commission at three million Canadians-is discouraged from obtaining adequate medical care because of inability to pay. On timing, it is almost inconceivable that the Kennedys could make their play at least until 1972. President Johnson is constitutionally allowed two terms, and so will run in 1968 if he is physically able to do so.

If Vice-President Humphrey should succeed to the presidency before then, he will of course run for election in his own right in 1968. No Democratic aspirant for the presidency would try to seat an incumbent president at party's national convention unless the president had brought the country to the edge of disaster.

If Mr. Johnson survives his full two terms, the Democratic nomination will sponsibilities of decision and of execu-tion in this matter are essentially pro-vincial." Why then is the initiative being taken at this time, not by the pro-vinces, but by Ottawa?

According to the prime minister's statement of Monday, the circumstances dictating a federal role are two-fold. Investigations have persuaded the govern-ment that, while all provinces favor a scheme enabling their residents to have access to comprehensive physicians' services on a pre-paid basis, there are "considerable differences as to the type services which they regard as needed."

The first circumstance suggests a federal willingness to shepherd the pro-

Speculation about the future cannot usefully be carried too far. Any plans of the Kennedys can be upset by international catastrophe, domestic depression, upset Republican victories in 1966 or 1968, the rise to national prominence of John Lindsay if he wins this year's mayoralty election in New York, or the unexpected death of Mr. Humphrey.

Impressive Groundwork

But at present the Kennedys are laying an impressive groundwork for their future. Robert, as the elder, has been leading the way. As a liberal Democrat, he has basically supported Mr. Johnson. But he is carefully carving out an independent position to the "left" of the pendent position to the "left" of the President, to use a meaningless term which is nevertheless well-fixed in American political jargon. He is showing himself to be nobody's stooge, and he may hope to become the rallying point of Democratic party elements as Mr. Johnson enters the final "lame duck" stage of his nessidence. of his presidency.

Some of Robert Kennedy's doings have already created the impression of rivalry with Mr. Johnson; but they have been exercises in upstaging rather than opposition. # Stole Show

Robert Kennedy stole the show from the President's United Nations speech tailed plea for a treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons. And last week he made a strong speech on the need for political rather than military solutions to revolutionary situations, making head-lines by deleting from his delivery sections of the printed text which appeared critical of the government's conduct of the Viet Nam war.

He is making himself very con-spicuous indeed for a newly-elected junior senator, and Edward is also show-ing himself as a born political profes-sional. He is said to be milder mannered than Robert, easier-going with the multitude, and better able to suffer the presence of fools. He has made few enemies; his brother has made many. So if the forces of time and circumstance work against Robert, Edward may even-tually be the Kennedy family's presidentdesignate.

You constantly refer to this happen-ing in Britain, whereas every reputable published work on the subject confirms there is no widespread abuse by patients.

The latest report printed in the press here a few days ago is that of a study made by the College of General Prac-titioners in Great Britain. While the College report found that the British general practitioner works only 39 hours per week, provides an old-fashioned service in out-of-date premises and does a less effective job than doctors in other coun-tries with medicare, the report confirmed that "family doctors are not harassed by hordes of demanding patients."

The junior chambers of commerce of French Canada have asked that the CBC's French networks be turned over to the Quebec provincial government. It is an impossible request, and one which could only encourage separatism if it were fulfilled.

Thompson's Idea Cupboard Bare

How to treat other men's flowers? In this case, a collection of speeches by Robert Thompson, MP, published by McClelland & Stewart, under the title: Commonsense for Canadians? With kindliness? There are few books by Members of Parliament; Mr. Thompson is an MP colleague who has always been kind and gentlemanly to me; he is not in a position of great political influence and does not promise to be.

With causticity? Mr. Thompson has bored me and most other MPs with his elephantine parade of cliches and platitudes. As a parlia-mentarian he is about as exciting as Walter Dinsdale or George McIlraith. All his performnces are rich with earnest sincerity which parodies the politician parodies the position.

Straight? Perhaps Mr. Thompson has something to say. Leave the bite to the J. B. Mc-Geachys who say that the name of Social Credit "should be Boobs Unlimited" or to the George Bains who describe Mr. Thompson as a man "who has let failure go to his head."

Straight it shall be! This collection of eeches was chosen, probably from sheaves of Thompson speeches, by Patrick Nicholson, a journalist who produces a daily column for the Thomson papers in Canada. Mr. Nichols is not an avowed member of Social Credit although he has tended to be the most favorably-inclined member of the press gallery vards that party since it reappeared in the House after the election in 1962

Each speech used has a brief paragraph of introduction. For example, the first extract, titled Conservatism in Contemporary Canada, has this lead-in: national leader of the Social Credit As national leader of the Social Credit Party, Bob Thompson was invited to address this convention. This proved to be a very sig-nificant speech—it has been called "the bend in the road as far as Social Credit is concerned.' For the first time officially, Bob Thompson spoke of the conservative aspects of Social Credit, and expressed the basic mone-tary aspects in such a way that it was cometible with the facts of political life."

"Extract from address to the National ing Social Credit Convention, Winnipeg, Aug. 8, 1964.

The speeches are not hard to read; in fact, ach easier than last year's set of Pearson much easier than last year's set of Pearson speeches put out by the same publisher. Mr. Thompson has a smaller vocabulary than Mr. Pearson and somewhat less sophistication. There is an absence of invective. Mr. Thompson is above that kind of speech-making. Perhaps the best extract to illustrate the critical Thompson is from his maiden speech in the Common Mr. Michael State of Pearson and Pearson in the Common in the Co in the Commons. You can gather that I have not been overwhelmed with a fancy for Commonsense for Canadians. It is straightforward Bob Thomp-son and you have to read it to appreciate how small a core of ideas and knowledge this man

Except for the short exhortation to service Except for the short exhortation to service clubs or church groups, the speech or the printed word is not Mr. Thompson's forte. Television is. And it continues to enrage politicians of all parties that they are invariably meeting those people who say: "I kind of like that Thompson fellow; he seems so full of commonsense." One of the parties did a survey on the television impact of the party leaders and found Mr. Thompson far alread of the rest. and found Mr. Thompson far ahead of the rest

One explanation I make for the general disregard in which Mr. Thompson is held by the overwhelming majority of MPs is this frustration over the seriousness given him by the television viewers out in the country.

The other reason for the enmity is more subtle. Mr. Thompson is consistently trite, banal, and platitudinous in a way that all of us in politics have to be, at least some of the time.

Thus he is always a mirror of ourselves, at nost of us would candidly acknowledge to be our more insincere moments. More maddening, Mr. Thompson is not insincere in his sincerity. He is not a bad man, nor even a

Laos: Defused, Still Confused HONG KONG-Meanwhite, By JOHN KIRKWOOD Times Far Eastern Correspondent

whatever became of Laos? With the steadily increa ing and worsening conflict in South Vietnam grabbing the world's headlines, it's almost as if the little backward kingdom of Laos had disappeared from he map altogether.

Just 18 months ago, when the Viet Nam war was still considered strictly an anti-guerilla operation of limited dimensions being fought by Vletnamese troops and mere handful of American advisers, the trials and tribulations of poor little Laos made it the hottest spot in South east Asia,

Today, with the sort change situations overnight in this precarious part of the world, the situation is completely reversed. Laos has been relegated to the occasional paragraph on the back pages. Why has this happened?

What is the political signifi-cance? What is the future of Laos?

Before considering such questions, though, it's always bear in mind the that in the little kingdom of Laos, which is considered important in Southeast Asia simply because of its strategie location, no one

In short, confusion is generally the accepted order of matters as figuring out who is fighting whom on the bar-ren Plain of Jars north of the capital city of Vientiane or deciding what the current money exchange rate is in Vientiane itself.

However, observers of the Laotian scene seem agreed that the escalation of the war in South Viet Nam has severe-ly crippled the Laotian Comist forces, both militarily and logistically.

This, they claim, is the reason for the non-appearance last spring of a fresh Com-

They're Content

With the monsoon season now well under way, Laotian troops — who are never too eager to fight each other, anyway - appear content to hang on to whatever strongholds they hold instead of attempting to combat the elements as well as the enemy.

Observers, among them American Ambassador to Laos William Sullivan, agree that the lull in military operations can be ascribed to increased American bombings and strafings in Laos as a result of the escalation of the Viet Nam

Coal Miners In White Collars!

LONDON-The coal miner of the future may be a white-collar worker, sitting at a soot-free bank of controls while machines do the dirty

Britain already has one such pilot project in opera-tion and is rapidly mechanizing most of her vast coal pits. Chief among the British projects is a remote-controlled operation at Bevercotes in Nottinghamshire—a $54,000,000 pit which shows the shape of mining's future. At Bevercotes, coal is chewed from the face of under-ground walls by huge ma-chines, dumped into conveyor belts, washed, sorted, delivered to the surface and deposited in waiting railway cars, and not a human hand touches it. To keep mine roofs from caving in, hydraulic roof sup-ports are automatically propped into place. Remote vision cameras watch for trouble and a barrage of other equipment regulates various phases

Most of the work is supervised from an underground control booth as sterile as a massive laboratory.

Lao forces who are now re-ported drastically short of food, gasoline, fuel oil, am-of the Pathet Lao forces are concentrated, is mostly a mountainous area deficient in food and therefore is almo totally reliant on logistic support from North Viet Nam, which now appears to have been effectively crippled by

In addition, it appears that the escalation in the Viet Nam crisis has forced the North Vietnamese (who are reported to have an esti-mated 10,000 troops in Laos) to withdraw military supplies and cadres from Laos to North Viet Nam to aid their own intensely demanding effort.

On the political side, it is also reported that because of dropping morale and ineffectual offensives against the Government forces, there is now a serious split in the Laotian Communist political organization, with at least five groups struggling for the leadership Among those vying for ower are reported to be Prince Souphanouvong, titu-lar leader of the Pathet Lao and wily half-brother of Laotian Prime Minister Prince Souvanna Phouma, and Colonel Kang Duane, a dissident Neutralist who defected to the Pathet Lao in 1963 with about Strongman Prince Souvanna clings doggedly to the reins of office as prime min-ister of the farcical Coalition government composed of Left. ists, Rightists and Neutralists.

The main questions remaining to be answered now are whether the Pathet Lao will retain its membership in the Coalition government and whether it will respect the constitution or break away completely to end all pretence of coalition, which, after all, has long been a pretty mythical affair, anyway.

The most optimistic view seems to be that Prince Souvanna will be able to assume an even firmer grip on the country's affairs and somehow strengthen Laos' shaky neu-

HOW COULD I HAVE BEEN SO STUPID?

NEW YORK-Theodore C. Sorensen, a top aide to the late president John F. Kennedy, says after the 1961 invasion-of-Cuba fiasco he heard Kennedy ask himself: "How could I have been so stupid, to let" them go ahead?"

rensen gives his account of Kennedy's role in the un-successful invasion by Cuban rebels against the Castro-regime in the Look magazine. The article is the first of a series of excerpts from a forthcoming book.

Soresen says the whole Bay of Pigs disaster "seemed to move mysteriously and in-exorably toward execution without the president being able either to obtain a firm grip on it or reverse it.'

Sorensen's account agrees substance with the version of another Kennedy aide, Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., published by Life magazine this week. While Schlesinger was in on the invasion plan and advised Kennedy against it, Sorensen learned of it afterward in long talks with

Aides Differ

Both the Kennedy aides differ with Richard M. Bissell a former U.S. Central Intelligence Agency - official, who said recently the invasion might have succeeded if Kennedy hadn't cancelled a second air strike at Cuban airfields.

The first strike was made early Saturday, April 15, two days before the landing. The second strike was scheduled for dawn Monday after the landing party was ashore.

Sorensen says the cancellation of the air strike was unimportant because the project was doomed long before that. He says Kennedy told him later he should have cancelled the entire operation, not merely the air strike.

"For it was clear to him Sorensen says, "that he had in fact approved a plan bearing a little resemblance to what he thought he had approved."

Objections

Sorensen says there had objections from such men Schlesinger and Senator William Fulbright (Dem.-

Ark.) and there were even doubts among some of the CIA and milinary planners. But those doubts were not pressed, Sorensen says, because "both the CIA and the loint military before." joint military chiefs were moved more by the necessity of acting swiftly against Castro than by the necessity for caution and success."

'He should have paid more attention to his own politically sound instincts and to the politically-knowledgeable men who did voice objections directly, instead of following only the advice of Latin American experts Adolf Berle Jr. and Thomas Mann.

He Was Aghast After the disaster, Sorensen

says Kennedy was "aghast at the enormity of his error, angry at having been badly advised by some and let down by others." Despite frequent briefing.

the president was completely misled about the operation, Sorensen says. Kennedy thought it was to be a "quiet infiltration" with two possible outcomes—"national revolt or a flight to the hills," Sorensen says.

Instead, the affair was trumpeted in advance as an invasion and neither a Cuban uprising nor escape of the in vaders into the hills was re-motely possible. Sorensen

Counted on It

In addition, Sorensen says, Kennedy thought the Cuban exile leaders understood that the United States could not overtly help, when in fact they were counting on it. And, he says, Kennedy was told the invasion had to be rushed before Castro got strong enough to repel it. when in truth he already was that strong.

Kennedy Brothers Poised

For Big Score in 1966

Many key Democrats around the country are casting about for a place to plant their allegiance. In numerous in-stances a lingering attachment to the memory of John F Kennedy predisposes these politicians to follow his brothers' lead. A repeat performance by Bobby and Ted on the stump in 1968 could further enlarge their status. In 1970, both face campaigns of their own, but by then their political bank could be bulging.

In the current Washington climate, overcast as it is with criticisms of President Johnson, it seems necessary to state that this kind of Kennedy activity will not represent a direct political assault upon If he keeps his health, runs and wins again in 1968, he is beyond challenge in his own party. No professional thinks otherwise. The Kennedys accept this as a fact of life. What they are building, more or less inevitably as they chart their own careers, is not so much an opposition as a sort of separatist movement looking to the future.

They are the conscious bearers of the Kennedy heritage, one of the most striking political phenomena of the century. It is a thing compounded of youth, idealism, the practice of the vigorous life and an aggressive "new

Early-Early

TORONTO (CP)-In the mid-9 months when Christmas prod-ucts are being turned out at full speed, One of the fastest-growing Christmas products are artificial trees.

Chances are about one in five that the tree you buy this Christmas will be artificial. Four years ago the odds were one in a hundred, says one manufacturer. Thomas Beck, a Hungarian born engineer whose company makes artificial trees, says the move toward man-made trees shows no sign of slowing. One of the key factors in growing popularity is that they now look like real trees, he says. He cited three other reasons for their acceptance:

1. They are economical be cause they can be used year after year. 2. They don't shed their needles.

3. Most trees manufactured

now are fireproof.

Mr. Beck's company makes the needles from poly vinyl chloride, a product developed after two years of research by Shawinigan Chemical Co. Ltd. of Montreal.

Some companies make red and silver trees, but others are Assd Eiec 45s 2d, Asid News 22s 116d, Eiec 28s 6d, Univ Strs 45s. # Medicare 'Could Hinder Fall Election

OTTAWA (CP)-Prime Minispromoting a nation-wide medical care program could hinder as much as it helps any possi-ble plans for an October gen-eral election, cabinet sources said today.

Informants within the federal ministry say that, while the Pearson government is elated over developments at this week's federal-provincial conference, it does not regard the meeting as purely a plus factor as far as fall electioneering is concerned.

Mr. Pearson, reported by some informants to be thinking in "fairly definite" terms of an Oct. 18 vote, himself told reporters following Thursday's conference windup that he does not regard medical care, in particular, as a "springboard to an election."

Finance Minister Gordon, on the other hand, acknowledged this week that action on medical this week that action on medical care is "right near the top" of the list of previous election campaign promises the Liberals want to complete before seeking a new mandate.

His comment helped set off a flurry of speculative reports that the near-consensus among provincial premiers in favor of Mr. pearson's medical care proposal had clinched an October

Other cabinet sources said, however, that developments on medical care could adversely affect an October vote in at least two ways.

In the first place, they said, ft has in a sense robbed the government of a reason to go to the people. How can a government that seems to be getting tion tell the voters that it must have a new mandate to continue, they ask. Secondly, an October election would mean holding the conference of health ministers called for September to deal with medical care details right in the midst of a federal campaign.

This could kill any real progress at that meeting," said one cabinet minister. "Some of the provinces are 'iffy' to begin with and trying to pressure them in the middle of an election campaign might only harden their opposition."

Second U.S. Space Sentry In Position

N-Test Policing System Completed

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The second of two Sentry satellites was man-oeuvred into station 69,000 niles above the earth

Thursday night.
The move completes a space triple play aimed at developing a foolproof means of detecting ecret nuclear explosions out to 200.000,000 miles in space.

A radio signal ignited a small motor aboard the satellite. The firing jockeyed the 525-pound craft out of an elliptical orbit ranging from 120 to 69,000 miles and spitted it to a room proper and shifted it to a more circular course about 69,000 miles up.

A motor aboard a twin satel-lite was fired Tuesday night to place it in a similar orbit on the opposite side of the globe. A third satellite launched on the same Atlas-Agena rocket from Cape Kennedy Tuesday continued in the wide elliptical path as planned. It is measuring radiation in the Van Allen belt.

Special meeting of city council today approved the appointment of private engineering consultants Willis and Cunliffe to complete Bastion Square renewal.

The step was taken in committee of the whole council as plans for creation of a department of community development were adopted.

Recent disruption of city planning and special projects func-tions resulted in a special committee headed by Mayor R. B. Wilson, which reported an eight-page study and recommendation of the Beatles' concert in Portland Aug. 22? tions today.

Willis and Cunliffe will hire Roderick Clack to head its new community development advisprojects consultant for the edity, Mr. Clack designed the public square and beautification aspects of Bastion urban renewal.

The rest of the Saver household went camping the other day, and as I was fairly tired . . . and lazy . . I decided to stay home. About dinner time, as I was contemplating having an egg for supper, the doorbell rang and there were several friends from Vancouver who were over for the day and who had just decided to "drop in." They hadn't eaten and so I invited them to stay for dinner. But like old Mother Hubbard, my cupboard resembled the Florida Keys after a visit from Hurricane Hilda.

make a run for it when I remembered several items I'd tucked in my freezer for occasions such as this.

These items are brand new in Canada and are presently selling at three packages for $1. Packed in a sanitary plastic bag are slices of roast beef—ranging from medium rare to well-flone, to suit everyone's taste. To cook, just remove from the package and cook in the plastic bag. Included is the most delicious beef gravy and the meat is as tender as if you'd just bulled it from your over.

Serve these cold, as a filler for sandwiches—or as an addition to a cold plate dinner of ham and salads.

Also available for a quick meal is meatballs cooked in apaghetti sauce. Warm them up, serve over noodles, and you have all the ingredients necessary for a dish of good Italian

PETTICOAT PATTER

By Judy Creighton

It isn't often that someone comes along and eaks out against such child psychologists as Dr. Spock, but at last a Toronto woman has challenged them. She has penned a column in a Canadian publication that is more than causing a controversy amongst the parent set and to my way of thinking she is a saint!

Mother of seven children, Sheila Keirar claims that like most young mothers, she was for many years "hero worshipping" the men and women who make their bread and butter from offering advice in paper-back books on the raising of youngsters. But, no longer—she has seen the light and tossed

How well I remember when expecting our first child, my "Baby and Child Care" until we thought we were knowledgable

Then the little bundle arrived. Everytime she walled, we ran; every squeek was greeted by her nervous mother and father jumping as if a bomb had hit the homestead.

Parental Palpitations

We spent so much time trying to calm each other down, were both nervous wrecks! Like many babies, our little one had a touch of colic in the first three months of her life: Night after night we walked the floor and in between read and re-read Spock.

His advice was pretty vague on how to treat the aliment, so in desperation I called the granny of the family.

I almost dropped the telephone when I heard her advice.

"The poor wee lamb is hungry" she explained "but give her a drop of rye whiskey mixed with a bit of sugar."

That did it. For the rest of the night, peace reigned in the nursery—baby slept almost around the clock!

It was an old Scottish remedy that saved the day (or night) and from that moment on the baby hadn't a sign of colic.

The months went by and we were suddenly faced with what Dr. Spock calls the "terrible twos." It is at this turning point in a tot's life that he becomes aggressive, naughty and just plain "ornery," according to the noted doctor. How to deal with it?

The Smashing Set

Well, if the little darling insists on smashing his favorite toy hammer against the television set, just ignore him. You wouldn't want him to develop a personality problem now, would you? one, would you?

If he pulls all the neighbors bedding plants out by the roots, sit him down and explain that such an act is not nice. Don't be harsh, he might become an embittered juvenile delin-

When trying to get the child to eat his vegetables (and he won't) don't needle the little angel, just take the plate away and he can fill up on cookies.

In other words, Dr. Spock's advice is to spare the rod and spoil the child.

The Light Dawns

After several months of following this expert's answer to our child's sins, we began to wake up—slowly mind you. Our little two-year-old bundle was taking advantage of our no-discipline attitude and having a ball! New light dawned for us. We started looking around at other situations with friends' families.

The general attitude was that Dr. Spock and his buddies are really wonderful when parents haven't a clue how to change a diaper, treat the measies or make a formula,

But that is where it ends.

Children are normal human beings who are usually one jump ahead of their parents. And when naughty, there's just one answer—you guessed it—another old Scottish remedy!

SLIGHT MISGIVINGS However, Alan Ehrlich, of Eglinton, Ont., had some slight misgivings.

A favorite for top honors, Alan was overheard saying: "I don't think I'll be telling this horse when to jump. He'll be jumping when he decides." Calgary contestants brought their own mounts by trailer.

Only riding event Thursday, apart from practice, was a race for the "stable boys."
The Maritimes' team hope it was an omen.

The race was won by Dun-can girl Susan Jaggers who is acting as their stable Everything is organized down to the last detail. Ever

NORMAN CRIBBENS

LORD JIM Conrad on Film Royal Theatre

In this lavish production of Joseph Conrad's famous novel, Peter O'Toole dominates the wide screen with the good looks of a young lion with a golden mane.

But, for me, his rendering of Lord Jim is more reminis-cent of Lawrence of Arabia than the blue-eyed romantic in Conrad's novel. The man-nerisms are much the same; silent enigmatic stare when questions are addressed to him; the reluctance to utter a single word that seems unnecessary; the fey look of a man who seems to be living in another dimension.

As many will remember. Conrad's novel dealt with the subtle erosion of character created by a solitary act of cowardice. It is the story of a boyishly romantic sailor whose dreams of glory are lost at sea when he de a filthy transport vessel during a storm.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

CHANNEL CHIT CHAT: It was bound to be. Two of CBS-TV's rural comedy series in the coming season, Petilcoat Junction and the new Green Acres, with Eddie Albert and Eva Gabor, will have the same setting, and will have stories in which members of the two casts appear in each other's shows.

Ken Murray's informal movies of Hollywood stars, past and present, will fill the minutes at the end of some of NBC-TV's shorter Tuesday night movies in the coming season . . . The once popular Peter Gum series may be turned into a movie in the not long distant future. There is also word it may return to the home screen as a new one hour weekly series.

Mexico is hoping to have a satellite in operation in time for its

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

GENE KELLY IS BEING MOBBED by agents trying to seil their clients as stars in his forthcoming original Ira-George Gerahwia musical, which he will produce and direct for 20th Century Fox. The plot deals with an American aviator, a First World War ace who falls in love with a girl from the French music halls, and is based on songs written (but never published or recorded) by George Gershwin. Gene says the feminine lead could be played by any one of four stars who would be ideal—Julie Andrews. Shirley MacLaine, Debbie Reynolds or Lesile Caron—but he's mysterious about the male lead. To quote: "My choice for the aviator is a secret. Believe me, it'll be a huge surprise."

. . . Meanwhile, back at the cinema tote boards, Julie is reliably reported to be worth $1-million for a single picture, and Arthur Freed is supposed to be willing to pay that amount to get her for a giant MGM musical . . . One of the major networks wants to sign Lies Minnelli to an exclusive contract, something like Barbur Streisand's.

ACROSS FACE

The charred remains of her shirt were across her face. Police believe the killer set fire to the shirt and dropped it on the young girl's face after strangling her—possibly in a bid to make identification difficult.

Her slacks and underclot were scattered in a nearby field. A post mortem has beer ordered. Results are not expected until Saturday.

Police are not yet sure if Violet was sexually assaulted.

The British draft, reported to differ slightly with the Cana-dian approach, is to be brought before a NATO council meeting in Paris Monday before presentation to the 17-country disarma ment conference resumi sions in Geneva Tuesday

Chalfont told a press conference Thursday that British and Canadian aims in the preven-tion of nuclear dissemination are similar. But Canada favors wider treaty terms—a sort of package deal — while Britain broach, getting the countries to agree to ban the spread of nu-clear weapons. The British ap-proach also would have the non-nuclear countries agree not to acquire or manufacture nuclear weapons independently.

The German government has expressed some concern about a nuclear dissemination ban on the grounds this might block the Germans from ever sharing fully Western nuclear strategy and operations

But Chalfont said he could see no reason why negotia-tions to develop some form of joint nuclear-sharing plan could not be continued while nuclear dissemination plans are under

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)

The U.S. Navy today christens a glearning white vessel designed primarily to go no place but down.

The 12 by 57-foot steel cylinder, called Sealab II, will be sunk off La Jolla, Calif., in mid-August as an underwater astronaut Scott Carpenter—who will live and work at a depth of about 200 feet for up to 30 days. ped among children of lower children in the general population intelligence quotients.

The $850,000 project is a second step in the navy's "man in the sea" program, ultimately aimed to provide deep-ocean bases from which divers can roam, freely for periods up to 90 days at depths down to 800 feet. The first step was Sealab I, a 10-foot shorter vessel used by four divers for 11 days at a depth of 193 feet off Bermuda last summer.

TORONTO (CP)—An American biochemist said Thursday a survey has shown that children with poor mouth hygiene had a lower cavity rate than most other children.

Dr. Arnold D. Steinberg told the International Association for Dental Research the survey also sowed that the cavity rate dropped among children of lower children in the general popula-intelligence quotients.

Teeth of 562 boys and girls between the ages of nine and 21 were examined at Lincoln State School, Ill., where IQ levels ranged from 20 to about 80, Dr. Steinberg said. Persons with an IQ of 20 to 50 are regarded as trainable and those with an IQ above 50 as able to be educated.
